Mediterranean diet and physical activity

Childhood can be a period of crucial importance for health and future well-being due to the large number of changes that take place at the cognitive, physical and psychological level. Physical inactivity and the establishment of healthy eating habits are the main modifiable factors that determine both physical and mental illnesses. A better understanding of the mechanisms through which physical activity and adherence to the Mediterranean diet can improve self-esteem and quality of life would facilitate the development of school interventions in an effective way.

Different possibilities and potential of AI in educational contexts

Artificial Intelligence is having a significant impact in the educational field, among other issues, by creating new learning ecosystems that are much more attractive and powerful in the development of the teaching and learning process of students in the different educational stages. With the main purpose of knowing the different possibilities and potential that it offers, as well as the educational implications that derive from its implementation, this session aims to address, based on several investigations carried out in this field, the following aspects: what is artificial intelligence, what AI resources tend to be used with students, what benefits their use brings in the teaching and learning process of students, what are the main trends in research on AI, among others.
